

THE ENVISANT DIFFERENCE

New Beginnings

Spring is a time for fresh starts, and as the new AVP of Sales here at Envisant, I'm excited for the chance to get to know you better and be part of delivering the Envisant Difference to you and your members.

I also want to take a moment to recognize Anthony Mondello and thank him for his leadership and the strong foundation he helped build. His dedication to our credit union partners and commitment to service have made a lasting impact, and I'm grateful for the opportunity to advance that work.

As a payments industry and data analytics enthusiast, I'm energized by the chance to work alongside you and our Envisant team to help strengthen your programs and support your vision for quality member service. I look forward to connecting soon.

Temporary Fixes vs. Permanent Value: What a Credit Card Rate Cap Really Means

A proposal to temporarily cap credit card interest rates at 10% has generated debate. Whether it ultimately becomes policy is uncertain. What is certain is what the conversation reveals: growing consumer frustration with credit card pricing and deeper dysfunction in how the broader market delivers credit. For credit unions, this moment creates a clear opportunity to lead.

NCUA Stablecoin Rulemaking: What Credit Unions Need to Know Now — and What Comes Next

Congress enacted the GENIUS Act in July 2025 to establish a national regulatory framework for payment stablecoins. A central feature of the Act is that insured depository institutions, including credit unions, may not issue payment stablecoins directly. Instead, issuance must occur through separately licensed entities subject to federal oversight.
